

UNITED STATES INDEPENDENT MAIL STAMPS 1844-1845

INTRODUCTION

For approximately eighteen months—from December 1843 until the end of June 1845—a privately-owned system of mail routes competed with the United States post office. Known to the public as the “Opposition Post Office” or “Independent Mails,” this group of private letter-carrying firms won a huge share of the market along the most lucrative Eastern routes.

It is not overstating the case to say that by challenging the postal monopoly, the Independent Mails were the catalyst for American postal reform in 1845.

Elliott Perry, an authority on Independent Mails, estimated that as many as 22 million letters were carried by private companies during one year. If accurate, this figure represents approximately half of the letter volume Perry estimated would have been handled by the U.S. post office without competition from the Independents.

Most of the individuals and companies that started to carry letters in 1844 had already established their reputation as express operators who transported packages and valuable freight between cities.

Among the major advantages offered to the public by the Independents were:

- Cheaper postage (one third of U.S. rates)
- Fast service along an established transport network
- Conveniences such as letter drop boxes and stamps
- Incentives to prepay postage (discounts on stamps)

In response to the threat posed by Independents, the U.S. government mobilized against them through arrests, lawsuits and finally legislation to expand and enforce the postal monopoly. The result was the Act of March 3, 1845—effective July 1—which reduced postal rates and gave postal authorities the power to prosecute anyone who attempted to carry letters between cities.

The new laws against private mail routes forced the Independents to terminate letter-mail operations on June 30, 1845. Thus ended a short-lived but very significant era of private enterprise. However, its impact on the U.S. postal system is still felt today.

CONTENT AND ARRANGEMENT OF EXHIBIT

This exhibit focuses on the stamps issued by nine Independent Mail companies in 1844 and 1845. These stamps are the first to be regularly used in the United States to prepay postage on mail carried between cities. They were preceded only by the stamps issued in New York (City Despatch Post, 1842) and Philadelphia (Robertson-Blood, 1843) for use on locally-addressed mail.

Every issue is represented in this exhibit by the largest recorded multiple (if one exists), all known paper and printing varieties, cancellations and covers showing how the stamps were used. The covers include examples of conjunctive usage, involving two or more firms for delivery from the sender to the addressee. Many items were acquired from the important collections formed by David Golden, Richard Schwartz, the Hall family and Edgar Kuphal.

Census data is based on records of Independent Mail stamps and covers maintained by Scott R. Trepel and the Hale census published by Michael Gutman.

AMERICAN LETTER MAIL COMPANY

The American Letter Mail Co., the second largest of the Independent Mail firms, was founded by Lysander Spooner, an advocate for “Cheap Postage”. Operations started in January 1844. Offices were established in New York City, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore (closed March 1844). Sometime in June 1844, Spooner sold his interest in the firm, but the company under new management continued to carry mail until June 30, 1845.

1844 (January) Small Eagle Issue—“20 for a Dollar” Printed from Engraved Plate of 20 Subjects (5 x 4)

According to Dr. Julius Blanchard, the Eagle vignette on the Small Eagle stamp was made from a stock die originally engraved by Durand, Perkins & Co. In 1832 the firm went out of business, and its assets were sold to Rawdon, Wright, Hatch & Edson, who probably printed the stamps.

This is the third engraved stamp issued in the United States.

Die proof in Black on India mounted on card. Scratches at left indicate it is a reprint proof made long after 1844.

Second Printing on Medium/Thin Paper. Complete sheet of 20.
The supply of Small Eagle sheets that reached philatelists probably came from the estate of Lysander Spooner, founder of the American Letter Mail Co.

1844 (August) Large Eagle Issue—Black and Blue (Unstated Denominations)
Printed by Lithography from Stone of 20 Subjects (4 x 5)

The Black and Blue Large Eagle stamps are recorded as early as August 1844, soon after Lysander Spooner sold out his interest in the firm. They were probably prepared by the new management.

The two different colors may have originally been intended for single (Black) and double (Blue) rates. Why? Because unlike the Small Eagle design, the Large Eagle does not have a denomination stated, and the color scheme is identical to Great Britain's 1p Black and 2p Blue issued just a few years earlier in 1840. The two stamps were ultimately used to pay single rates (5c when sold at 20 for $1.00).

The Large Eagle stamp design and the banknotes of the era have the imprint of W. L. Ormsby of New York. However, the vignette is known on printed material dated in the 1830's. It is likely that Ormsby incorporated the Large Eagle stock die into his engravings. The vignette was used to make the design matrix for the lithographic transfers.

The Blue Eagle

The Large Eagle in Blue is recorded on covers dated from August 1844 thru June 1845, but the greatest concentration of dates falls into the period after the Act of March 3, 1845, which meant the imminent demise of the Independent Mails.

It is likely that the Black and Blue stamps were originally intended to pay the single and double rates, following Great Britain's color scheme, but very few Blue stamps were utilized. By mid-1845, when the end of the American Letter Mail Co. was certain to come on July 1st, the remaining Blue sheets were released and sold as single-rate stamps.

By the same reasoning, it is illogical to think that a new printing in Blue would have been made after March 1845, when it was known that private mails would be stopped on July 1st.

Brainard & Co. operated to and from New York, Albany and Troy on the Hudson River steamboats, except during the winter when navigation was impossible. Operation started circa June 1844. Brainard & Co. was closely associated with Hale & Co.

HALE & COMPANY

James W. Hale (1801-1892) operated the largest of the 1844-45 Independent Mail firms. Elliott Perry estimated that Hale carried 60% of the Independent Mail volume during this period. Hale claimed to have more than 1,000 agents and 100 offices.

1844 (March) Blue with “13 Court St.” Address—“20 for $1.00” Printed from Stereotype Plate of 20 Subjects (5 x 4)

The first Hale & Co. stamps were printed in Blue and Red shades. Robson Lowe reported the printer was S. Dickinson of Boston. They were sold for 6c each or “20 for $1.00” as stated in tiny type on one of the envelopes within the design. The first issue has the “13 Court St.” address on the center envelope. The earliest recorded usage is a Blue on cover dated March 14, 1844 (Gutman records), probably close to the date of issue. The same plate was used for all printings. The plate exists in three states:

First State: “13 Court St.” address, issued in Blue (eku 3/14/1844) and Red (eku 8/27/1844)

Second State: Address deleted, issued only in Blue (eku 6/1/1844, shown in this exhibit)

Third State: Address deleted, damaged plate (eku 9/20/1844)

Hale & Co. stamps were cut with rectangular margins and octagonally around the design. All stamps in this exhibit with octagonal margins are described as “Die Cut.”

Address Change Overprints After Move from 13 Court Street to 23 State Street

The change-of-address overprints—handstamped and handwritten—were implemented after Hale moved its Boston office from 13 Court Street to 23 State Street in April 1844 (this date according to Robson Lowe). The earliest recorded date of use of the Address Deleted stamp is June 1, 1844 (shown in this collection).

The “City Despatch Office, 23 State St.” overprint on the Blue and Red first issues was made from a handstamp that was used by the Boston office of Hale’s agent, W. B. Kimball. A modified version of this marking has the words “City Despatch” deleted and is found on a June 22, 1844, cover with the Address Deleted stamp (Gutman collection).

The Blue single and Red pair displayed here were discovered in New York City in 1893. They were found in a hidden compartment of a desk by Charles Gregory, who documented his discovery in an article published in the January 1894 Metropolitan Philatelist.

HARTFORD MAIL ROUTE

The Hartford Mail Route was operated by Francis A. Fuller and Edward W. Parsons, both residing in Hartford Conn., beginning in late July or early August 1844 and continuing until June 30, 1845. The route between Hartford and New York could be navigated by rail and/or steam. Fuller was an agent for Thompson's Express and a principal in Phillips & Co. Express. Parsons was a bookseller with an office next door to Phillips & Co. The Hartford Mail Route connected with Hale & Co., and several covers are endorsed "Hale & Co." It is possible Hale was a principal.

1844 Black on Glazed Paper (Unstated Denomination)—5c on Yellow and 10c on Pink Printed from Engraved Plate of 12 Subjects (6 x 2)

The Hartford Mail Route stamps were printed from an engraved copper plate of 12 subjects. Glazed paper was used: Yellow for 5c stamps and Pink for 10c stamps. Some believe that a third Buff-colored paper was used (shown below); others believe that the Buff paper is chemically changed. In an 1895 interview with E. W. Parsons, one of the principals in the firm, reported by W. H. Bruce in The Eastern Philatelist, the design of a giant mail-carrier stepping across hemispheres was attributed to a Shakespearian metaphor, cited in Julius Caesar, Act 1, Scene II. Cassius speaks:

Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world,
Like a Colossus, and we petty men,
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about,
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.

The circular Letter Express stamps depict an American marine charging ashore with sword raised and Union Flag waving, and a naval vessel in the background. Two types were produced, which differ in the lettering around the circle. Conjunctive Usage with Pomeroy Stamps in October 1844

The Letter Express carried this letter from Monroe to Buffalo or possibly further east to Albany. From there it was carried by another firm to New York City. Pomeroy's Letter Express had previously announced it was going out of business, but other covers prove that Pomeroy was still carrying mail into early October. The Albany-Buffalo route was taken over by Wells' Letter Express, and the Albany-New York City route went to Overton & Co. The presence of the Pomeroy stamp on this letter indicates that Pomeroy may have still been involved in one leg of the route or that Pomeroy stamps were still valid for the purpose of crediting a portion of the prepaid postage.

OVERTON & COMPANY

Overton & Co. was a letter-and-package express and foreign-mail forwarding agency founded by Richard C. Overton prior to July 3, 1844, and closed June 30, 1845. The principal route was between Boston and New York. Overton & Co. issued stamps for use on inter-city letters.

1844 Bird & Letter Issue—5c Black on Greenish (Unstated Denomination) Printed from Typographed Plate (Probably 20 Subjects)

The Overton stamps are known with and without “Free”. An article by Richard Schwartz (Penny Post, Oct. 1994) puts forth a theory explaining the meaning of the “Free”. Stamps were sold singly at 6¼ cents each, or 20 stamps for a dollar (5c each). Therefore, the purchaser of a sheet of 20 would essentially receive four free stamps. For emphasis, “Free” was added below four positions. The existence of a bottom left corner margin stamp without “Free” rules out a sheet of five rows of four. If the sheet were four rows of five, the four last stamps would have the “Free” (diagram shown below).

Use of Pomeroy Markings on Overton Covers

The 12½c rate is paid by the pair. The letter was carried by Overton to Albany. Pomeroy had already announced it would stop carrying letters, but covers indicate that the firm was still carrying mail in early October. The Albany-Buffalo route was taken over by Wells, and the Albany-NYC route went to Overton.

The "Paid" handstamp has features which exactly match the "Paid" at the center of the "Pomeroy & Co.'s Express, Paid" handstamp found on covers dated from November 1843 to January 1844, carried between its Albany and NYC offices. The "Paid" without the outer lettering next appears on Pomeroy covers dated from August 1844. These covers indicate that the Albany office had possession of the "Paid" device.

The Pomeroy "Paid" and "Cd." markings are next recorded on Overton covers. The "Paid" is found on covers dated in early October 1844, and the "Cd." is known on Overton stamps. Pomeroy and Overton had offices in the same building in Albany, and it seems certain that Overton inherited these devices when Pomeroy quit the mail business.

POMEROY'S LETTER EXPRESS

The principal route was between Buffalo, Albany and New York City. Pomeroy announced the end of mail service in September 1844, but letters carried in early October are recorded.
